Workshop N 327

Protection of the most vulnerable children online

Protect children, especially the most vulnerable of them, from the dangers of the Internet:
The need for a child online protection framework for developing countries.

Tuesday 22 October 09:00-10:30
Conference room # 2 / Nusa Dua Hall 1

Organised by TaC – Together against Cybercrime Int. & the University of Gezira, Sudan

Children are the most beautiful thing we have. We should help our children and youth to see today the hope for a decent future.

Young people and children are frequent users of ICTs and the Internet. They need to be aware and should be informed of the online risks and their responsibilities to allow them to obtain the maximum benefit that the Internet offers without compromising their safety.

It is important to pay particular attention to vulnerable children and youth, as they are often absent from current studies or research analyses.

This workshop proposes to exchange experiences with experts and participants from developing and developed countries of the world.

The question of creating an effective child online protection framework for the developing countries will also be discussed.

* The definition of vulnerable people is given by the Tunis Agenda for the Information Society.
